

THREE MORE FORTS SILENCED BY ALLIES

Positions at Narrows of the Dardanelles Laid in Ruins.

Great Fleet Now Menaces Defences Front and Rear.

London, March 2.—Three more forts of the Dardanelles have been silenced by the combined Anglo-French fleet, which now consists of 24 warships in all, according to official dispatches received here tonight. The bombardment of the allies, after a few days' suspension over Sunday on account of the heavy weather, was continued Monday, and the results were again successful. With the result that today French warships, in the Dardanelles, are the only ones to be seen in the straits, were put out of action.

It is stated that the British fleet, which has been in the Dardanelles since the beginning of the war, is now in a position to attack the forts from the rear.
